SYNOPSIS

Jason Laker has taught across various disciplines and held progressively more complex student affairs positions, earning him several awards for his teaching, research, and service. With extensive expertise in gender issues in higher education and broad experience in student affairs administration, he is well poised to assist campuses create more inclusive and supportive learning environments by addressing everything from student development and conduct to organizational development and strategic leadership issues.

"Jason is an excellent educator and anti-sexist male activist. His educational style is one in which he creates safety for diverse audience participants. His presentations and workshops are interactive and thought provoking around hard-to-discuss topics such as men and masculinities, and sexual violence. In addition, his consulting skills are comprehensive — he allowed us to utilize his time and talent in a variety of ways — touching the lives and enhancing the knowledge of faculty, staff, students, and community members."

— Marlene Kowalski-Braun, Associate Vice Provost for Student Affairs and Inclusion, Western Michigan University
